

“Why I love living at The Hammocks at Southern Hills”

It was early January 2011 and I knew I deserved better. I was living in a nice area in Fairport, but realized I wanted more, i.e., updated living conditions, well maintained grounds and a more convenient location. So with the help of my three sons and daughter-in-laws, we began to search out for some alternatives. As soon as we drove into The Hammocks, I fell in love with the place.

Lisa Gottshall was the first person I met and she couldn't have been more accommodating and friendly. My search ended as soon as it started. As with any move, I expected it to be hectic and a bit stressful. Well, I never knew was ahead.

The day I was moving in, I was rushed to the hospital for a fractured hip. I had surgery to insert three pins and went on to rehabilitation for three weeks. My sons and daughter-in-laws moved me in and even unpacked for me. When I came home June 7th, I fell in love with my place all over again. Unfortunately due to my slow recovery, I was not able to go to the pool this year or attend an occasional coffee hour in the clubhouse. I have had very little opportunity to meet my neighbors but catch a hand wave and smile from time to time when I am coming or going to an appointment.

I am very pleased with how the grounds are maintained and have a lot of opportunity to sit out on my patio to commune with nature. I even have some names for a few of the birds and deer that come through on a regular basis.

Although summer is winding down, I am anticipating a full recovery and look forward to being much more active in 2012. I am scheduled for a full hip replacement in mid-September. I look forward to full mobility and my independence soon (so do my children). I plan on being a frequent member at Coffee Hour starting in October.
